

A computer has two types of devices: a) Input devices b) Output devices

Input Devices:

Input Devices are used to send the information to the computer. They receive information from outside. This information is of different types; just like our eyes can see things and our ears can listen. For example: keyboard, mouse.

